Proposed changes to the MED Domain Statement – Please VOTE YES when asked

For the last year we have been working on updating the MED Domain Statement to better reflect the current work of the division. I am happy to say that this MED Domain Statement has been approved by the AOM Board of Governors to be put forward to a vote of all MED members. We will over the next months be working with AOM to bring this to a formal vote. I do hope that members will see merit in this modified domain statement and vote yes when the voting system goes live (likely in July or August of 2017).

The Management Education and Development executive committee is proposing a minor change to its domain statement as a consequence of its recently completed five-year review. Changes to the domain statement were discussed at the MED Business Meeting at the August 2016 annual AOM conference. The proposed domain statement change does not change the core focus of our division. It offers a more balanced reflection of recent trends in submissions and a reorientation towards the core education and development research mission of the division, shaped in part by the emergence of the TLC (Teaching & Learning Conference), the domain statement of which is rooted in the practice of teaching. This received unanimous support from the members of the MED committee, 13 votes to 0 and following consultation with all other AOM divisions, it was proposed to the AOM Board of Governors, whom approved for voting on by MED members. Below are the current domain statement, followed by the proposed modified domain statement and then the rationale for proposing this change.

Current Domain Statement of the Management Education and Development Division

The Management Education and Development Division supports theory development and research in management education (academic) and leadership/management development (non-credit instruction). We also support the practice of management education and development by fostering the skill development of our membership through providing workshops in improving effective teaching, learning, and participation and engagement strategies. Major areas of focus include: theoretical advances or empirical evidence about effective and innovative instructional methods or technology; applications of learning theories; and evaluation of studies of the effectiveness of management education and development techniques. Research and benchmark practices in coaching, outcome assessment, learning styles, on-line learning across cultures and environments are of interest as the division serves its membership, the Academy as a whole and the society at large. (Revised 10/11)

Revised MED Domain Statement if voted YES by the membership

The Management Education and Development Division supports theory development and research in management education (academic) and leadership/management development (non-credit instruction). MED is the education theory, practice and policy research division of the Academy of Management. We enable effective practices of management education and development by encouraging research on programs and institutions which addresses issues at all levels of management education delivery, from individual learner through education and learning policy. We foster the skill development of our membership through workshops on improving effective teaching, learning, participation and engagement strategies. Major areas of focus include: theoretical advances or empirical evidence about effective and innovative instructional methods, technology, management education and development techniques, institutional structures or education policies; and applications of learning theories. Research and benchmark practices in coaching, outcome assessment, learning styles, on-line learning across cultures and environments are also a focus of the division. (Revised 3/17)

Justification of Proposed Change to MED Domain Statement

This proposed MED domain statement change flows from our five-year review. Our domain statement was last changed in 2011, in response to changes in the delivery of education (e.g. the emergence of online education) and the reflection of the then five-year review on the strategic direction of MED. This remained unchanged in the next five-year review, as the environment was broadly stable. Since our last review there have been two important changes that stimulated this proposed revision to our MED domain statement: the emergence of the Teaching and Learning Conference (TLC) and evolution in our paper submissions.

The five-year review involved consultation with multiple stakeholders, including current and former MED committee members, the membership themselves during multiple stages of the process (including at the MED Business Meeting in August 2016), and two iterations with the DIGR (Divisions and Interest Groups) committee of the Academy of Management. In particular, the DIGR committee challenged the MED division to think more deeply about their core purpose and value contributions to the AOM. The outcome has been to focus our division firmly in research about education (including development) theory, practice and policy, whilst maintaining our traditional focus on fostering skill development (which pre-dates the creation of the TLC). Two major changes to the MED landscape, one within AOM, and the other externally have influenced the types of contributions we make to AOM and the nature of our submissions. Neither result in the need for a new interest group, but rather a restatement of the core purpose of MED in the current environment.

First, a major change in the AOM occurred between our last five-year review and the 2016 review, namely the creation of the Teaching Learning Conference. Prior to the TLC, the MED division saw itself as supporting all AOM members in the development and exchange of best teaching practice. The TLC states in its domain statement that “the goal of TLC is to support members across all divisions in the practice of teaching. The conference engages AOM members as teachers, increases the visibility of teaching both within and outside of the Academy, and positions the Academy as a global leader in management teaching in addition to its current leadership role in management education research.” We believe that this restatement of our core domain complements that of TLC and is firmly rooted in the long tradition of the MED division to focus on education and development research.

Second, our proposed revised domain statement responds to changes in the submissions of the division. There has been a continuation of traditional submissions, which remain in our domain statement, coupled with a growth in submissions that centre around the role and impact of institutional structures (e.g., managerial and contextual changes to business schools and how organisations themselves engage in management development and interact with educators) and how education policies shape learner experiences, program structures and outcomes (e.g., the impact of accreditation practices on management education and development).

The MED executive believe that the proposed revised MED domain statement is not a change in the core focus of MED, which remains education and development research (via our research program) and skills development in these domains to our members (via PDWs). We believe that this proposed change better reflects the diversity of current member’s research interests and creates a strong platform from which the division and by extension AOM can grow. This revised statement has the potential to draw in education researchers not only from business, but also from disciplines that interact with business. For example, as Education, Engineering, Law and Medicine departments that increasingly provide management education to their students (either on their own or in partnership with Business and Management departments) and could benefit from research insights on effective management education that our division currently offers.

I do hope that MED members see value in the above modified MED Domain Statement and will VOTE YES in the upcoming MED membership vote that will be organized online by AOM.

Revision of MED Constitution

The MED constitution has not been updated in many years. AOM has been encouraging divisions to review their constitutions and update them in light of best practice that has emerged from reviews by other divisions and also the experience of the division. The MED executive committee have been working on this for a number of years. We are nearing the completion of this work and propose to recommend changes to the constitution for your consideration in a forthcoming vote. The main changes will be:

- Modification of MED purpose and domain in constitution to reflect proposed new MED domain (if voted yes by the membership);
- Clarification of the organisational structure of the division, especially the role of the executive officers, following the best practice recommendations of AOM;
- Minor changes to the process of electing executive officers of the division, following the best practice recommendations of AOM;
- Changes to the process of replacing elected officers if they are unable to continue their duties at any stage from the point of their election through to the completion of their term of office.

In making these changes we have been guided largely by the best practice of AOM and their recommendations for constitutions of divisions. In the case of changes to the process of replacing elected officers this is based on the experience of the MED division in managing the infrequent, but highly consequential, scenario of officers of the division stepping down temporarily or permanently from their role. It is important to recognise that as a voluntary organisation people may step down for many reasons, all of which are perfectly valid. The issue of how to replace them has proved challenging, especially as the recommendations of the current constitution are impractical.

An example of this challenge was when our incoming program chair had to resign due to very understandable personal issues. There was a vote at the 2015 MED Business Meeting where the membership gave permission to hold all officers in place for one year, to manage this resignation. This presented an operational challenge for the organisation of the 2016 program, the outcome of which was that I continued for a second year and Program Chair, Barb Ritter for a second year as Chairperson (and she did an outstanding job leading our division!), and Jacob Eisenberg a second year as Past Chair (in charge of elections – whom also did a great job of putting together a competitive and successful election process). The proposed changes to the constitution ought to enable such an occurrence to be managed within a clear constitutional structure in future years.

MED Five Year Review Report Approved by AOM and Next Steps

I recently wrote to all members informing you that the AOM have approved the Management Education and Development division's five-year review report 2012-2016. For those that may not have received this communication, here is an update on the five-year review report. It will form a guiding process for future developments in our division. AOM requires that every five years a division undertake a review process, where they reflect on the opportunities, challenges, performance and future direction of their division. AOM review this report and make a decision as to whether or not the division ought to be renewed for a further five years. Under the leadership of Barb Ritter, a committee worked through 2015 and 2016 undertaking this review. I am happy to report that the AOM have accepted this report and renewed the membership of the MED division for the next five years.

I encourage members to review the MED five-year report and the comments of the AOM review committees. You can find these documents by following the below links.

The MED committee has been working over the last number of months implementing some of the recommendations of the 5-year report, which will guide the efforts of the MED committee over the coming years. Amongst many other initiatives that this report has recommended, include a review of our domain statement and updating of our constitution. The committee have worked on both and received approval from AOM for these initiatives to be voted on by the membership. We are finalising the process with AOM and will be doing so soon.

Thanks to all the members of the five year review committee for their work: Barb Ritter (Chairperson), Peter Mc Namara, Toni Ungaretti, Katherine Karl. Thanks also to all the members whom contributed to this work as part of the review process (Ben Arbaugh, Ken Brown, Erika Small, Sabine Hoidn, John Ross, Wanda Cousar, Kim Gower amongst others). The work of this committee was focused on continuing to develop the MED division to serve the needs of us all as members. We hope that you as an MED member will continue to contribute to division's activities during the Annual meeting, via the conversations on the MED listserv, and most of all in your education research and practice in your home institutions, focused on improving the lives of our students and education partners.

Sign up to become a MED Ambassador!

The MED division of the AOM is proud to be home to an increasing percentage of members from around the world. The Ambassador program represents an intentional effort to increase and organize global interactions, particularly within MED's scope.

A MED Ambassador is a MED Division member who volunteers to represent a country (or geographical region) before the remainder of the membership and beyond. This geography may be located inside the US. Ideally, MED Ambassadors should live and work within the area they represent

The main goals of the MED Ambassadors Program are to:

- facilitate and increase international scholarly interactions between MED members and their stakeholders (e.g., their students, employers, etc.),
- develop projects which involve, engage, and serve MED members in a global scale, and
- develop products or services that contribute to the research, teaching, and service objectives of MED members all around the world.

To volunteer, or for more information on the Ambassador program please visit our website at <http://division.aom.org/med/ambassador-program/> or contact Sabine Hoidn, MED Membership Chair, University of St. Gallen, sabine.hoidn@unisg.ch, or Emmanuel Monod, MED International Liaison Officer, Shanghai University of International Business and Economics, (monod@suibe.edu.cn) or any other member of the MED leadership team.

Exciting events at AOM 2017 PDWs!

Greetings MED Members! Posted below are the PDW workshops for 2017. These should make it easy for you to schedule, find, and attend your sessions. We are very proud of the high caliber of workshops, and the wide range of interests that will be covered. Your Management Education and Development Division strives to provide the most contemporary classroom pedagogies, the latest learning technologies, a rich variety of research ideas and opportunities, and a broad array of programs so that all members can find workshops to fit their needs.

Also remember to mark your calendars for Saturday, August 5, at 7 pm! We will be holding our social at the Center for Civil and Human Rights, 100 Ivan Allen Jr Blvd NW, one of the beautiful buildings around the park and our hotels. Drinks and desserts are on the menu, and this event is FREE to all MED members! If your AOM membership is ready for renewal, remember to choose MED to take advantage of this great networking opportunity to mingle with all your colleagues and explore the Center, which traces the history of international human rights. Remember, there is a reason MED is consistently voted one of the most collegial divisions at Academy, and we look forward to seeing you at the Saturday evening social to show you why!

Survey about a MED-supported Small Conference in Shanghai, China

Fellow MED member,

Our division is considering the possibility of a MED-supported small conference in China that would be held in early June, 2019. It would include not just competitive (or "traditional") paper sessions, but also workshops with Chinese executives, faculty and students. Sessions would be held in partnership with a local University in Shanghai. Would you please complete the below short questionnaire and send, via email, to our division's International Liaison officer, Emmanuel Monod, Shanghai University of International Business and Economics (email address is also below at end of this short survey)?

Please email just this last page with your answers!

1- Would you consider attending a MED-supported small conference in Shanghai?

(a) Definitely yes (b) Definitely no (c) It depends on the following:

Please type your answer to complement (c) here:

2- If it were solely up to you, how many days should be allocated for papers sessions? (Rank in order 1-4, top is 1.)

Table with 2 columns: Rank, Days (one day, two days, three days, four days)

3- How long should the entire small conference last, including paper sessions and workshops? (rank order 1-4, top is 1)

Table with 2 columns: Rank, Days (two days, three days, four days, five days)

4- Which of the following registration fee levels would you be ready to pay? (rank order 1-4, top is 1)

Table with 2 columns: Rank, Fee (50 USD, 100 USD, 150 USD, 200 USD)

5- Would you find it acceptable if sessions took place in a local university?

(instead of a hotel or convention center, to reduce the registration fee)

(a) Definitely yes (b) Definitely no (c) It depends on the following:

Please type any additional comments here:

6- This small conference will include an opportunity to meet Chinese executives. What is your preference with respect to how this segment should take place? Choose one or rank order up to 1-7, top is 1
